MUTH'S TRUTHS

Here's an excerpt from an article published yesterday by Shawn Fleetwood of The Federalist on the latest twist in Nevada Secretary of State Cisco Aguilar's ongoing efforts block cleaning up the state's dirty voter rolls...

Despite its efforts to ensure only lawful votes were counted in the 2024 election, the Citizen Outreach Foundation is once again facing headwinds from Aguilar. The Democrat elections chief sent a letter to the organization on Tuesday, informing its members that "no further action will be taken" on several of the EIVRs [Election Integrity Violation Report] it has already filed. . . .

Speaking with The Federalist, Muth took issue with the secretary's classification of its EIVRs as "residency challenges," and disputed the notion that the "personal knowledge" requirement governing citizen-led voter roll challenges applies to EIVRs.

“He’s trying to say that an election integrity violation report is the same as a challenge, and they’re completely different,” Muth said. “There’s nothing in statute or code anywhere that ... says that you have to have personal knowledge in order to be able to file an election violation report.”

Muth concluded his remarks by saying that Nevadans “can’t” and “shouldn’t” have confidence in their state’s ability to run clean and transparent elections “as long as the secretary of state is blocking efforts to clean the voter rolls” and doing the “bare minimum” to comply with the NVRA.

“Under the current circumstances, there’s no reason anyone in Nevada should have any confidence that our elections are safe and secure,” Muth said.
