MUTH'S TRUTHS

(Chuck Muth) – With great fanfare, pomp, and jubilation, Nevada Secretary of State Cisco Aguilar announced this week that 162,000 voters have been purged from Nevada's dirty voter rolls.

It's a smokescreen.

The voters who were removed were already on the "INACTIVE" voter list, having been suspected of moving or dying. But by law, they could only be completely removed after missing two successive federal general elections.

Which they did last November.

The real problem is that thousands of moved or dead voters remain on the ACTIVE voter registration list – meaning they're automatically sent a mail-in ballot - and Aguilar is obstructing citizen-led efforts to have them moved to the INACTIVE list.

Gee, I wonder why?

He's also refusing to investigate 881 credible, verifiable reports of potential voting fraud in that election, which were submitted by Iris Stone of the Pigpen Project, and refuses to comply with Nevada's public records law.

He won't tell you that.

I just did.
