MUTH'S TRUTHS Kids Saying "Yes, Sir" Has Liberals in a Frenzy – Georgia Mentor Teaches Life Skills, Critics Cry "White Supremacy" When a young man in Georgia named King Randall posted a short video on X, he probably didn't expect it to stir up a national debate. In the clip, Randall is teaching a group of boys how to do basic car maintenance; checking the oil, washer fluid, coolant, and brake fluid. Pretty useful stuff for kids who will one day be drivers, husbands, and dads. But what really set people off was how the boys responded when he spoke. Each one answered with a firm "Yes, sir."

FAMOUS LAST WORDS “I’m so unbelievably sad that the CDC is losing all the folks who told me if I follow the arrows on the floor at the grocery store then I won’t get COVID.” - @esoryelsnya “80 percent of black children in Chicago are born to single mothers. If black women in the city stopped having kids before marriage, and if black men stopped abandoning their families, the crime problem would go away overnight.” – Matt Walsh “I used to say @Tim_Walz was the biggest buffoon in politics, but after what he just did, now I say he's just a massive piece of st. Watch the video of him wishing for President Trump to die and judge for yourself.” - @ScottJenningsKY LAUGHTER IS STILL THE BEST MEDICINE
