Nothing says Texas like Muslims beating themselves in the streets outside of a mosque.

Why stay inside the mosque and beat yourselves privately when you can take the spectacle to American public streets in a deliberate show of force? That is exactly what Shia Muslims are doing in Houston, Texas, during the annual Muharram Juloos.

This is the public street procession held during Muharram – the holiest mourning month for Shia Muslims, commemorating the killing of Imam Hussain and his family at Karbala in 680 AD. Participants flood the roads with black flags, banners, and loud chants while men perform synchronized chest-beating known as matam, rhythmically pounding their chests, sometimes with chains, in a public display of grief and power.

We didn't grow this here in Texas. We imported it. By flooding the country with millions from third-world Muslim nations where these aggressive public rituals are the norm – Pakistan, Iraq, Iran, and beyond – America is now watching its own cities transformed into replicas of the Islamic world. They could easily mourn quietly inside the mosque like any normal private religious practice. Instead, they deliberately choose to do it in your face, occupying public roads and asserting control over American soil.

It wasn't enough for them to pour out of the mosque in the middle of the night to beat their chests in unison and flex raw power. Now they've taken it further by marching down the streets of Houston once again, seizing full control of public space just as they do every single year.

Shia Muslims flooded the roads with black flags, banners, and loud processions. Men performed synchronized chest-beating in the open, a ritual they could easily keep private. Instead, they choose the streets. This does not look like Texas anymore. A red state is being transformed year after year, while the mainstream media in Texas and America stays silent and refuses to cover the conquest taking place in plain sight.

These are not innocent religious observances. They are aggressive shows of force – a clear glimpse into the future, these imported groups are building here in America. What begins with nighttime chest-beating outside mosques quickly escalates into full public street marches that become normalized dominance. This is precisely how they spent Father's Day weekend in Houston – turning American roads into foreign battlegrounds of ritual power.

Mass immigration from third-world Muslim countries brings the people – and their public rituals of control follow right behind. They could mourn privately. Instead, they choose to occupy your streets like an invading army marking territory. This is the military takeover of a red state in real time. Where are the women in these processions?

Wake up, Texas. Before every weekend looks like this.
