America: "The First Domino"

American Muslim scholar Yasir Qadhi on Abdul El-Sayed’s victory:

“Europe is long, long changed... America is the final stronghold.”

“Persevere, be patient. This is not the end game.”

Qadhi points to Europe as already transformed and America as the final arena in a patient, long-term struggle for power. This is how ideological capture advances: one election, one institution, one domino at a time.

DSA chose its man in South Florida. Voters rejected him.

Oliver Larkin wanted to “abolish and prosecute ICE,” abolish the Senate, and advance BDS. He said he was accountable to “100,000 [DSA] members nationwide.”

Canary Mission Featured in the New York Post

Canary Mission’s research was featured in the New York Post’s report on Mayor Zohran Mamdani’s controversial school-board appointees.

Canary Mission provided the Post with sources documenting the appointees’ anti-police positions, anti-Israel activism and political ties, helping expose how activists move from campaigning into positions of institutional power.
