Dearborn, Michigan, wants America to applaud its massively growing Islamic police department. The latest staged sales pitch is a Sharia-adherent female Muslim officer wrapped in a hijab, presented as proof of how “inclusive” and “compassionate” the force has become. Do not fall for the pathetic packaging.

That hijab is not a fashion choice. It is a public commitment to Islamic law. Dearborn is demanding that American police uniforms accommodate Sharia covering – that the badge bend to religious rules imported from a system that does not return the favor.

Name one Islamic nation that rewrites its uniforms so Christians, Jews, or Hindus can honor their faiths on duty. You can’t. Accommodation only ever runs one direction.

None of this is surprising when you look at who runs the department.

Dearborn Muslim Police Chief Issa Shahin stands proudly in front of a Lebanese flag and openly boasts about transforming his force. He praises his “Arab American” department, now 45 percent Arab — up from just three percent. He celebrates hijabs being respected even when facing the justice system. He closes speeches with “Hamdullah.” He brags about his strong, proud Palestinian wife and admits he has been actively recruiting to make the force more “representative.”
