

Stop These Things' Weekly Round Up: 20 September 2026

The wholesale environmental destruction which accompanies so-called 'green' energy is one of those troublesome facts that the wind and solar scammers simply hate.

Proponents and cultists tell us that the grand wind and solar 'transition' is all about 'saving the planet', although the efforts to identify the true threat to our environment becomes a little murky at this stage of their narrative.

The wanton destruction of millions of acres of forests, upcountry rangelands, productive farmland and pristine wilderness is skipped over to tell us that their game is about 'preventing' the planet from warming fraction of a degree a hundred years from now. Something about a gas upon which all life on earth depends. You know the rest.

Which brings us to this week's roundup.

Mark Gerard Keenan unpacks the theme above, starting with their corruption of the term 'green' by crony capitalists and their propagandists

We closeout this week with the team from Jo Nova, reporting on the mother of all rorts – the Federal Labor Government's home battery scam. Like every 'market' built on other people's money, both buyers and sellers pocket the cash, notwithstanding the supplier's delivery of substandard products, or delivering only a fraction of what they claimed to collect the subsidies on offer.

Surprise! Government battery bubble feeds crime, corruption, incompetence, safety breaches...
